

Springer Mountain Farm Fried Chicken at Table & Main has been named one of Georgia's "100 Plates that Locals Love"

ATLANTA, July XX, 2015— Table & Main was awarded the "100 Plates That Locals Love" distinction by Georgia Department of Economic Development's Tourism division (GDEcD) as part of its "100 Plates that Locals Love" which is featured in the state's new culinary guide, Georgia Eats.

"It's Georgia's outstanding local restaurants that truly showcase the state's rich flavors that locals and visitors love," said Kevin Langston, deputy commissioner for tourism at the Georgia Department of Economic Development. "Each dish on our list of "100 Plates that Locals Love" epitomize Georgia's culinary scene with locally made and grown ingredients. These are the best of the best in Georgia and we can't wait to share them with our visitors."

The Georgia Department of Economic Development Tourism Division is celebrating the state's culinary greatness this year. One of the initiatives selected the dishes that make our state's food unique, inspiring, and just plain good eatin'! As a part of this designation, each restaurant is featured in the Georgia Eats official culinary guide, which is being distributed by the 11 Visitor Information Centers statewide; on the state's consumer tourism website ExploreGeorgia.org; and on ExploreGeorgia.org's 14 social media channels.

Visit Roswell Executive Director, Dotty Etris, states: "With its acclaimed fried chicken, crunchy okra, array of fresh, local vegetables, and of course its fun Bourbon Bar, Table & Main is a hit with locals and visitors alike. Canton Street is known for its culinary delights, and Table & Main added to its charm and ambiance an outstanding restaurant with indoor and outdoor dining, capturing the spirit of Roswell and the spirit of great southern food."
